

Navy builds road near Wilpattu

With the entire country coming under one flag, and the liberation of the territory once controlled by LTTE, the opportunity has now opened up to resume long-neglected but essential development projects in the area. The Armed Forces are in the forefront in providing technical assistance, logistical support as well as manpower for these projects. The Navy, as always, is in the thick of the action. From Mannar in the West, to Batticaloa in the East, including the huge housing complex for Armed Forces personnel being built in Ipologama near Anuradhapura, the Navy is busy with a range of construction and infrastructure-related tasks. Pictures here show Navy personnel building the new road from Mahavilachchi to Mannar, skirting the Wilpattu jungle.
