

Vrou and Yolanda fashions in the spotlight

Housing an eclectic collection of high-end designer products, Cantaloupe Boutique introduces two new designers to the helm via 'The Saree'. It will feature creations by Vrou and Yolanda Aluwihare.

Vrou is the brainchild of Sarita Rajandran and Shyam Hettiarachchi which produces a boutique-style collection of bejeweled clothing, amongst them, sarees.

The brand, with its refreshingly new outlook on fashion offers stylish yet practical and wearable designs that accentuate the real beauty of a woman. Vrou fuses the best of cultures, a touch of Western and Eastern that blend seamlessly as one, but has a distinctive Sri Lankan feel to it.

Yolanda Aluwihare is a name that has always been synonymous with fashion in Sri Lanka, with well over 30 years of design experience under her belt. Inspired by naturalistic colours and designs, each of her creations is chic, elegant and the only of its kind.

Her work fuses the complex art of silk painting with natural materials and batik design, which give these pieces a combo that sets it apart from the rest of the market.

New attire for Sri Lankan team

Cricket fever has returned to the isle and MAS holdings together with Sri Lanka Cricket and the National Players came out with yet another victorious partnership as they unveiled the new attire collection for team Sri Lanka. Some well known faces in the cricket scene exhibited the new outfits at the event. Our photographer Saman Sri Wedage clicked these sportsmen and sportswomen on the ramp.

Jaya Dekma 2012

Renowned beautician Jayantha Gamage's students will hold a saree exhibition titled Jaya Dekma 2012 at the J R Jayawardena Centre (in front of Sathutu Uyana) on September 22 and 23.